Your local community art
space in New Brighton

About Brighton Gallery

We are a charitable trust aiming to encourage creativity in the community and promote local art and artists in New Brighton and Christchurch.

Brighton Gallery has a long history and has cemented an important place in the New Brighton community. It was started over 20 years ago by a group of enthusiastic local artists, some of whom are still involved today.

Why is Art Important?

Art is a way of expressing who we are. Our concerns, releasing stress and connecting with each other.

Art is a way of meeting. We have noticed that people have used the gallery as an opportunity for human interaction and we often have people pop in to the gallery because they simply want a chat.

Art is therapy. We have had people confronting issues such as addiction come along to the gallery and they have said that it has been an important part of their healing process.

Art is a way of learning about each other. We have a range of ages from school children to the elderly who are part of the gallery. We have members from different cultures and religions. The gallery is another way for immigrants to become integrated into the local community. People freely intermingle, breaking down barriers between generations, races and religions as we all learn from each other and are acknowledged as valued members of society.

What We Do

- Art Classes. This gives people of all ages a chance to learn, be creative, relieve stress, interact and grow. It also gives talented people in the community a chance to pass on their knowledge to the next generation.
- Art Exhibitions. All members have the opportunity to exhibit their work with monthly changeovers to ensure something fresh for visitors to the gallery. Members can also book the window or other parts of the gallery to hold a personal mini exhibition. The front window can also be used by non-members encouraging people to take that important first step with their creativity. The gallery is open 10am-4pm seven days for the public to come in and interact with the art and artists.
- Art Sales. All works in the gallery are for sale to the public, many at very reasonable prices. This gives people the chance to own a piece of local original artwork and support a local artist. When someone purchases or gives feedback it is also hugely valuable to the artist and acts as encouragement to further their talent.
- Free Community Art Classes. These classes held on Friday 10.30-12.30 and Sundays from 1.30-3.30pm are a chance for anyone to pop in and socialise with others and be creative. The gallery provides all materials and provides direction and help as required. We have a regular group of school children come in on Sundays.
- Art Book Library. Anyone can come and borrow a book from our new library of donated art books.

Engaging Members

- We have a new website and members have the opportunity to have a page on the website where there is a profile and examples of their work.
- Realising that many members never got the opportunity to interact with each other we set up a members only group on Facebook where people can post, chat, ask questions and be kept informed.
- We regularly email members with opportunities and news.
- We held our first annual Christmas party to give people the opportunity to meet in person and network, which proved popular. We had a bring a plate and provided beverages, a Colombia game one of our Colombian members introduced etc. Prizes were vouchers purchased from or donated by local businesses.

Revitalising New Brighton

The gallery is situated in Carnaby Lane which is becoming a vital hub in the reinvigoration of New Brighton. Our neighbours are the popular The Burger Joint and Switch Café. The gallery adds to the bohemian, funky atmosphere of the lane and gives people something to do in New Brighton when they visit. We are noticing people are venturing into New Brighton on the back of a visit to He Puna Taimoana hot pools and noticing all the great things happening there. We did a cross promotion with He Puna Taimoana where we gave away a double pass if people entered a draw which was hugely popular.

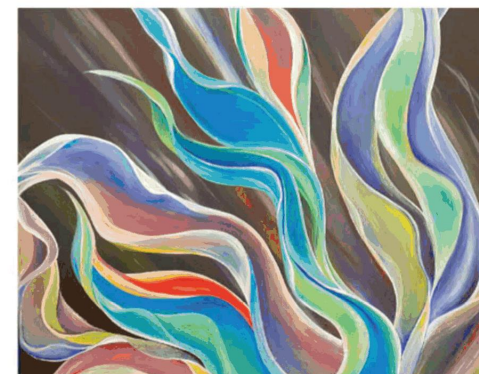

Initiatives & Events

Keep Calm and Buy Art

Held on Facebook during the level four lockdown this initiative aimed to keep the public engaged with the gallery and offer support during a challenging and stressful time for many. We held regular online art challenges for people to complete. One participant is now a member of the gallery and regular contributor. We also showcased works by local artists to help people to continue to maintain an income during this time the gallery was closed.

Pop Up Exhibition at The Palms

The Palms approached us to take over a vacant store space, fill it with art works and hold some free community classes during the July school holidays. The event was extremely popular and we noticed many people who would probably not normally venture into an art gallery feeling comfortable coming in as they did their shopping. The space was great as it was very accessible to people in wheelchairs so anyone could come in and view the art.

The art classes were also very popular and well attended by mainly children but also some parents. We displayed the works of the attendees during the exhibition and held a competition where the public could vote for their favourite. We also held an online exhibition of the works on our facebook page. The winners received encouragement and prizes. It was also a great way to further engage with the public and publicise the art of local artists and the gallery. We held the competition to win a double pass to He Puna Taimoana as part of this event and the names went into our email newsletter database so we can keep people informed as to what is happening at the gallery and opportunities for them to get involved. The event was so successful The Palms has invited us back.

The Art of Poetry

We held an exhibition called The Art of Poetry where we collected poems from local poets, in particular Mad Poets Canterbury and Catalyst, and then the artists did works inspired by the poems. Both poems and art works were displayed next to each other. The exhibition also included an open mic event where local poets came and read their works. Around 40-50 people attended. We posted videos of poets reading their works on our Facebook page. It was a successful collaboration between two different aspects of the arts that do not normally combine.

The event was so popular that when the Isaac Theatre Royal advertised opportunities to take part in Made in Canterbury we proposed the same for that event in conjunction with Mad Poets Canterbury. Due to be held on March 19 Brighton Gallery artists' works will be displayed in the upstairs foyer of the theatre during the event. There is also a ticketed live poetry reading taking place where local poets taking part in this event will read their works. It's also a chance to make the artwork of local artists and the opportunities the gallery offers known to a wider audience as well as support the Isaac Theatre Royal in what has been a challenging year re Covid-19.

Other Initiatives

- Well known local poet Peter Donnelly held a live poetry reading of his works at the gallery. We also helped him to publish a calendar of his works and art that was sold through the gallery. It was very popular.
- Two local dancers engaged in a performance art event where they danced and created a painting as they did so.
- Street artists exhibited their works as part of the New Brighton Street Art event.
- An under $50 art table put outside to encourage people into the gallery.
- An interactive art table, where people can take a work or add to an existing work, has been placed outside the gallery to encourage community engagement.
- We published a Brighton Gallery calendar.
- Numerous collaborations ie. one of our members has been assisting a local writer by illustrating their children's book so the writer can self-publish.
- Gallery artists have assisted members of the community with personal projects ie. painting a plaster mould, portraits etc

Opening to Community Groups

Recognising that the gallery space could be utilised in the evenings we have recently decided to open up opportunities for the space to be used by local community groups at night when art classes are not scheduled. We plan to advertise the opportunity for local groups as appropriate to use the space. This makes best use of funding to make the space useful to a wider section of the community so multiple groups, who would otherwise require funding, can benefit.

Example

A member of Mad Poets Canterbury has received funding to hold some art therapy classes and we have offered the use of the gallery space for this. This means that their funding money can be fully spent on the art therapy classes for the benefit of the recipients as Mad Poets Canterbury will not have to pay to hire a space.

Getting the Word Out

Because the gallery is involved in a lot of things the public can benefit from we have engaged more heavily in publicising the gallery and its activities including:

- Setting up Facebook events
- Regular Facebook posts
- New website, logo and brochure
- Advertising events on Event Finda, community radio etc
- Two stories in the Pegasus Post
- Media releases
- Column in The Wave each issue.
- A new voucher that people can purchase so their loved one can come in and choose a piece of art
- Mailchimp gallery newsletter
- Cross promotions with other local businesses such as He Puna Taimoana
- Engaging with other venues, events and groups such as Mad Poets Canterbury, The Palms and Isaac Theatre Royal

Art on show at pop-up exhibition

A POP-UP art exhibition and daily programme of art classes at The Palms has added colour to the school holidays.

The exhibition is spearheaded by Brighton Art Gallery and will include a variety of works by gallery artists along with works from other local artists and groups.

"It has resulted in a true showcase of art from the east side of Christchurch," said Brighton Gallery committee member and artist Karen Phelps.

Ms Phelps said that a pop-up exhibition is less formal than a gallery or museum and allows for a more immersive experience for the visitor where they can interact with local artists.

"We have so many talented artists living in the east side of Christchurch and it's great for them to have this vehicle to showcase their works on a larger scale to the public, and to open up conversation and discussion about art."

"East Christchurch is really taking off with the new hot pools, the Puna Taimana, proving very popular and more people discovering the gallery and the great local shops and cafes we have on this side of the city."

Artworks exhibited in the exhibition, including painting, drawing, prints and sculptures, will be for sale giving people the opportunity to purchase a unique piece of local art.

It will also include a daily programme of art classes led by local artists Tony Scanlon and Marco Cole.

Ms Phelps hopes it will encourage more Christchurch residents to explore their creative side.

The Brighton Gallery is open all year and holds regular exhibitions with local art for sale and art classes.

The exhibition will run until next Sunday.

Hot pools prove popular

THE CITY'S new beachside hot pools complex chalked up a sell-out first month as it headed for school holidays.

"The first month could not have gone any better," the Puna Taimana manager Merryn Skipper said.

"We have had more than 7000 guests visit the complex since it opened and the feedback we've had has been overwhelmingly positive."

Repeat visits were becoming the norm, and people were buying monthly or annual memberships.

The pools were attracting people to the seaside suburbs.

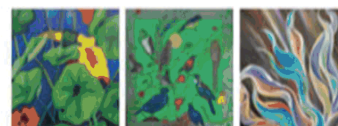

"Some of our guests have not been to New Brighton for a long time; now they're coming and putting a visit to the hot pools with a visit to the library, the playground or eating locally," Ms Skipper said.

"They're rediscovering what New Brighton has to offer."

Bookings were expected to remain strong, and capacity for the dip sessions was being increased because of it, Ms Skipper said.

CRAFTY: A pop-up art exhibition has enlivened the school holidays, which showcases artists in eastern Christchurch.

Stories

Diane and Neve: A grandmother and granddaughter who come to the free community classes on a Sunday for 'bonding' time together.

Andrea: Originally from Colombia, Andrea has bipolar disorder and says the gallery helps her to get out of the house and doing art has helped her to confront her anxiety and illness.

Sonia: Found emotional healing from addiction issues through the gallery. It gave her something else to focus on and was accessible as it was free.

Mark: An artist, prior to a car accident that left him with a brain injury and severe disabilities, the gallery provides a way for Mark to continue his art and have a 'voice'.

Kelly: She has found the gallery gives her a respite from the pressures of being a first time mum and people to chat to.

Teenagers: A group of teens come into the gallery every Sunday for the free community art classes. They find it's a safe way to hang out together, learn something new and mingle with people of all ages.

Jess: Recovering from lifelong addiction challenges Jess says the gallery gives her hope that something better awaits on the other side.

Rachel Deadman

"I thought I couldn't do art and only came along to try because the community classes were free so I thought 'why not?'. I started off colouring in the outline of a unicorn for my daughter's bedroom wall. Tony really helped me each step of the way and I found I really enjoyed it and was amazed at what I could achieve. Then I started experimenting with swirled and marbling paint techniques I had seen online and did some abstract paintings. Now I'm doing a three plaque painting for the wall of a friend's shed and I've just sold my first painting through the gallery! But it's not just about art. I find that even if I don't feel like painting on a certain day the gallery is a calming, relaxing place to come. You can have a laugh and chew the fat with others. You don't have to be doing masterpieces. The gallery is about friendship."
