

Sophie Howe visits Ōtautahi

Described as ‘the World’s First Minister for the Unborn’ for the last seven years Sophie Howe was the the first Future Generations Commissioner for Wales, the only role of its kind in the world. She held Government to account on how their decisions affect future generations, securing policy transformation on climate, education and social justice and influencing other countries to follow suit including advising on governance for future generations at UN level. Named at number 5 in the BBC Women’s Power List and as leading a Welsh plot to save the world, she is one of the UK’s Top 100 Changemakers, a Global Ambassador for the Wellbeing Economic Alliance and Anticipatory Governance Adviser with the School of International Futures. Known for a being a straight talking and inspirational advocate for those yet to be born, she is working globally to inspire other countries to adopt future generations legislation and support policy makers, progressive corporates and NGOs to help them to develop sustainability and wellbeing strategies based on future generations thinking.

Think Beyond 25-26 July

Sophie will be hosted for a number of conversations with specific groups. Ako Ōtautahi Learning City Christchurch will start the conversation with Sophie.

Each group will use their time with Sophie as a catalyst for next steps and opportunities.

All are invited to a public event on 25 July.

The two days will conclude with a youth hui.

We told you last time. It hasn't changed. What are you doing about it?

The ask

- Attend and amplify the City Conversation
- Youth Feedback session 3-4:00pm Wed 26th – who would be critical allies to invite?
- Engage with us after the Youth Futures event to hear outcomes from young people
- Ask different questions, be curious, lead the way
- Engage in intergenerational wellbeing as a way of thinking rather than a portfolio
